

CROWDED CAR RULE IS UPHOLD BY THE COURT

Man Who Crushed in Car When the Limit Number Was Aboard Is Convicted.

The rule of the Health Department against the overcrowding of street cars was upheld to-day when Jacob Horowitz, a feather merchant living at No. 4204 Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn, was found guilty of violating it before the Court of Special Sessions sitting in Brooklyn. "We regard the rule as entirely reasonable and we intend to uphold it," was the statement of Chief Justice Russell after he had conferred with Justices O'Keefe and McInerney as to the decision. Denis J. Wall, the conductor of a B. R. T. trolley, said that Horowitz boarded the car at Livingston and Bond Street after it contained the maximum number of forty-eight passengers and refused to get off. He was then placed under arrest. Sentence was suspended on Horowitz to-day. He indicated that he would appeal on the ground that he was not the last man to board the car and was improperly ordered from it.

"WE GOT GIAMARI," WITNESS DECLARES CORNELL TOLD HIM

Rofrano's Name Again Figures in the Testimony at Murder Trial.

Eye-witnesses to the shooting of Mike Giamari, ex-Sheriff Tom Foley's lieutenant in the Second Assembly District, gave testimony to-day in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court at the trial of Rocco Carnivale, also known as "Rox" Cornell. Carnivale is accused of instigating Gaetano Montimagno to commit the murder.

Michael Polito, seventeen years old, said he saw Montimagno fire three shots into Giamari's body after the latter had fallen at the corner of Oak and Chestnut Streets from the first shot.

Tony La Salle, who, with his brother Joseph, are serving life sentences in Sing Sing for the murder of James Minott, another Foley lieutenant, testified that while he was in the Tombs awaiting trial for the killing of Minott he met Carnivale, whom he had known for ten years, and conversed with him about the murder of Giamari.

"I saw him on a Sunday morning," La Salle told the jury, "about March 28. My brother and I were together. Carnivale came over to us and told us not to worry, as Mike Rofrano would take care of us, as he was worth $200,000."

"Anything else?" asked Mr. Brothers. "Yes, he said to Frank Fennimore, I want you to stop writing letters to Mike Rofrano about getting out. He is doing all he can for you."

"Anything about the killing of Giamari?" Carnivale said to us, "Well, we got that Giamari out of the way. He won't be no more a tough guy."

"Anything else?" Carnivale told us to keep our mouths shut, not to talk to any one and everything would be all right. He told us that Rofrano was going to have him bailed out. He was bailed out the next day.

Carnivale was in the Tombs at the time on the charge of subornation of perjury in inducing a witness to testify falsely against Giamari's two brothers.

La Salle identified the revolver with which Montimagno shot Giamari as the property of Carnivale. "I saw it in his possession in the Home Rule Democratic Club (Rofrano's club) once," La Salle told the jury. "He was four-fushing with it. I also saw him with it in the Chatham Inn in Doyer Street, which place Carnivale once kept."

Widow of Senator Murphy Dead. SEABRIGHT, N. J., June 10.—The widow of former United States Senator Edward Murphy of New York is dead at her summer home here. She came here some time ago from her home in Troy. Mrs. Murphy leaves a large family of sons and daughters, among them the widow of former Mayor Hugh Grant.

JUSTICE IS SUSPICIOUS WHEN ACTOR'S FRIENDS TELL OF HIS "PARTIES"

Holds Up Divorce Decree Sought by Mrs. Malcolm E. Williams.

Supreme Court Justice Lehman declared to-day that when a married man's best friends come into court and "peached" on him by revealing his escapades with other women when they were along it is time for a Judge to become suspicious. For that reason he announced he wasn't certain whether he would grant a divorce to Mrs. Marion E. Williams, wife of Malcolm E. Williams, actor and member of the Lamb's Club. Mrs. Williams, known on the stage as Minnie Radcliffe, married Williams in St. Louis in 1899.

Without apparent reluctance John M. Sainpolis, a well known star, and Hardee Kirkland, also an actor, told of going with Williams from the Lamb's Club to an elegantly furnished duplex apartment at No. 22 West Fifty-ninth Street, in the shadow of the Plaza Hotel. "Whose apartment was it?" asked the lawyer. "I don't know the woman's last name, but anyway she was at the door to welcome us," the actor said. "We met another woman inside and we sat down and had a drink. After a while a third woman came and we had some more drinks and talked a bit. You see, we were all good friends."

"Where did all you friends stay that night?" was asked.

"Oh, we had rooms and we didn't have till the next morning."

Justice Lehman recalled Mrs. Williams to the stand and asked her how she learned of the midnight "party" described by Kirkland and Sainpolis. She said a "good friend" told her over the phone. "But he goes out with other women, and every one knows it," remarked Mrs. Williams.

"Till by no means decide now whether a decree should be granted in this case," said Justice Lehman. "It's decidedly suspicious when good friends of both parties come into a court to tell all. The very fact that the witnesses Sainpolis and Kirkland walked into Mr. Williams's room to get a drink is very suspicious in itself—at least improbable—in the eyes of a practical world. The whole thing sounds too good."

OBJECTIONS TO SHOW. (From the Philadelphia Ledger.) "I object to Shaw's coarseness," said the lady with the ingrowing face. "And I" responded the man with the fringed collar and the lack of haircut, "to his of-course-ness."
